Learning is a bit strange and different from what it looked like back in March... but it's possibly weirder for staff at preschool than it is for the children! We can ensure that it's relaxed and fun and full of opportunity for awe and wonder which will make a huge difference.

I would imagine most children will have heard things talked about or news concerning the pandemic and many will have been aware of the worries and anxieties of the adults they live with.

AT HOME AND PRESCHOOL

we can provide lots of opportunities in their play to help them make sense of things. Children need to talk, question, question again (!), act out, focus their play around and gradually manage to feel comfortable with things they may have heard, seen or experienced.

Small world toys and open ended resources and role play are great for this.
